

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

mistaken in his information, it was Professor Woodburn who first suggested, some years ago, that the centennial should be celebrated by the erection of a centennial library and museum building, a project which now bids fair to be realized within the next four years.

REVIEWS OF BOOKS.

THE PEACE OF MAD ANTHONY.

[Frazer E. Wilson. 122 pp. Illustrated. Published by the author at Greenville, Ohio, 1909.]

This book is a revision of the author's earlier "Treaty of Greenville," and consists essentially of papers appearing in the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical Society's publications, and in the Ohio Magazine. It gives a detailed, readable and accurate account of the Indian troubles in the northwest, culminating in Wayne's victorious campaign, and of the Treaty of Greenville itself. The illustrations of monuments, views and medals, and the maps, add to the interest and clearness of the narrative.

DELAWARE COUNTY.

[G. W. H. Kemper, M. D., editor. 2 vols. Vol. I, 542 pp. Illustrated. 1908. Lewis Publishing Company, Chicago. Sold by subscription alone.]

Another of the county histories frequently noticed in this magazine, the manufacture of which is described at length in this number. Few people get to read them except the subscribers, and as they read only their own autobiographical sketches, little historical value is attached to them.